Dear Friends,

We build through partnership.

Every NOAHH home is built in partnership with families earning sweat equity, with volunteers taking time out of their lives to give back, with donors helping to fund our affiliate’s programs, and with community partners supporting our mission. As we build together, communities grow not just from the homes built but also from those building them. Through these partnerships—with you and thousands of others—we continue to find ways to expand your impact in New Orleans.

To expand your impact, we seek out new ways to meet the need for affordable housing. In a rental market where 39% of tenants pay more than half of their income for housing, there is an urgent need for better housing opportunities. Imagine paying $1,200 a month for a modest 3-bedroom home on top of childcare, utility bills, medical needs, and food—in a city where families earn less than $30,000 a year working jobs in food service, hospitality, transportation, or security. Through partnership, NOAHH has begun to include affordable rentals in our programs. Over the last decade, NOAHH has built rentals in partnership with elder musicians in Musicians’ Village, with Covenant House and CASA for our transitional housing rentals, and with future homeowners through our incubator program.

NOAHH has begun a new partnership with the New Orleans Redevelopment Authority to build both rentals and single-family homes in the Lower Ninth Ward that have already begun bringing residents back to the neighborhood where they grew up. Through these partnerships, we make it possible for more hard-working New Orleanians to find the stability needed to change their lives through financial independence and homeownership.

Our most important partnership, however, is with you. The support of thousands of donors and volunteers every year is critical to our building efforts and to keeping our homes affordable. In 2017, your partnership helped NOAHH complete 30 new homes, including eight rental doubles. We celebrated the completion of our 600th new home. We repaired 33 homes through our A Brush With Kindness program, empowering long-time residents to remain in their homes as stakeholders in the community, and we helped clear blight and overgrowth in the Lower Ninth Ward with an Supporting Our Neighbors: Disaster Relief

The incredible support New Orleans received from our neighbors following Hurricane Katrina has not been forgotten.

People from around the world gave us shelter or came to New Orleans to help rebuild when it looked like all was lost, and our neighbors in Baton Rouge opened their arms and took in thousands of New Orleanians in need. When heavy rains turned into catastrophic flooding in the Baton Rouge area in August 2016, NOAHH—and all New Orleanians—knew we had to step up and help our friends to the west.

Immediately after the floods, NOAHH reached out to our sister affiliate in the area. We sent teams to help gut flooded homes and engage in mold remediation, collected and delivered donations to the affected areas, and connected those in need with resources. Volunteers from Sheraton Hotels helped gut homes, and our friends at Honey Baked Ham provided lunches for the hard working teams. As many who have participated in relief efforts or had to face the task of gutting their own home know, it’s heartbreaking but essential work. Yet there are moments of joy amidst the pain, such as when NOAHH volunteers recovered a homeowner’s wedding ring.

In August 2017, a hurricane brought major flooding to the Gulf Coast, this time in Texas and southwest Louisiana. Repaying the kindness that our neighbors showed us in 2005, NOAHH reached out and coordinated with affiliates in the impacted communities, working with them on the best ways to offer support and providing advice based on our experiences during our own time of need.

Through the support of volunteers and donors—who were immediately calling the affiliate to see how they could help—NOAHH was able to help our neighbors when they needed it most. Once more, the coordination throughout the local community inspired us in its ability to lift each other up when it was most needed, and once more, we say thank you!

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>2017 VOLUNTEERS</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>TOTAL VOLUNTEERS</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>8,954 VOLUNTEERS</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>16,031 TIMES VOLUNTERED</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>126,088 HOURS</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>LOCAL VOLUNTEERS</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>5,648 VOLUNTEERS</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>8,302 TIMES VOLUNTERED</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>64,256 HOURS</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>SPRING BREAK VOLUNTEERS</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2,723 VOLUNTEERS</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>4,085 TIMES VOLUNTERED</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>32,676 HOURS</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Thank you,
Jim Pate
Executive Director, NOAHH

Jim Pate, Arne Sorenson (CEO of Marriott International), NOAHH homeowner Shanell Davis and family, and Drew Brees on site for the Marriott Spirit to Serve day of service.
Building Value in New Orleans East

Plum Orchard sits between I-10 and Wilson Avenue, and between Chef Menteur Highway and Dwyer Road. In the middle of it is America Street, where NOAHH has focused much of our building efforts in the last six years. In the spring of 2015, 10 homes were completed in just 10 days on and near America Street in the Habitat AmeriCorps Build-A-Thon. In the spring of 2016 we dedicated another ten homes on America Street. In less than a decade, NOAHH has completed 85 new homes, 39 home repair projects, and two neighborhood clean-up events in this neighborhood. According to real estate site Zillow, between August of 2010 and March of 2017, Plum Orchard saw a 48% increase in median home value.

Plum Orchard is unique both for the volume of building we’ve done there and the lack of other construction activity. In many neighborhoods where we build, there’s enough construction beyond our own that changes in home value can’t be entirely attributed to our efforts. By way of comparison, the median home value for the city as a whole increased by 17% during the same time.

Why is this exciting? When we sell a home to a first-time homebuyer, they gain all of the stability that comes with homeownership—a predictable and steady mortgage payment amount, no worries about not having a lease renewed, no fighting with a landlord over deferred maintenance and repairs...the list goes on. But they also gain something equally important: a vehicle for building wealth. Increased home value has a real impact on a homeowner family’s net worth.

The bright new Habitat homes all lined up along America Street are a landscape of hope. These homeowners all worked together on each other’s houses, building their own community in both tangible and intangible ways. That kind of renewal draws in other homebuyers who recognize the new energy in the area. That energy showed up when Whitney Jett began researching the lots available to her as a Habitat partner family. Whitney grew up in New Orleans East, so she was surprised when she realized where she wanted to live: “I narrowed down the lot to America Street before I even went to that street,” she said. “The street had a reputation, apparently. ‘Dale Street, America Street? Oh, that neighborhood’s rough.’ I thought, ‘Well, not according to the crime map.’ You go up America Street, and then you get towards Dwyer, and it’s all Habitat houses—and, whoa! I’m among friends.”

According to real estate data, the median home value for the city as a whole increased by 17% during the same time.

This shift in home value is also exciting for what it says about the transformation of a neighborhood. The bright new Habitat homes all lined up along America Street are a landscape of hope. These homeowners all worked together on each other’s houses, building their own community in both tangible and intangible ways. That kind of renewal draws in other homebuyers who recognize the new energy in the area.

UNITY BUILD

This October, 11 local congregations came together for Unity Build 2017. From October 5th to October 28th, believers of different faiths and traditions demonstrated their unity through common service, building a home with first-time homebuyer Nicole Pujol in just 13 work days. Unity Build participants raised funds, organized snacks and meals, and built the home.

Like so many Habitat homebuyers, Nicole’s drive to own a home came from her two children. “I wanted my kids to have a good strong foundation. To be able to say, ‘this is mine.’

And I wanted to work for something where I could say, ‘this is mine.” When she initially heard of the First Time Homebuyers program from one of her mom’s friends, she was skeptical. It sounded too good to be true. Once she met with NOAHH’s Family Services staff and learned more about how the partnership works, though, she knew it was the right fit for her family.

Even before the build began, Nicole’s daughter had made up her mind on the color of her new room (mint green), and Nicole had big plans for her new back yard: “I’m sure my son is going to want one of those little swing sets with the slide, so I’ll probably have to look into one of those.”

Some of the faith groups who helped build Nicole’s home have long had a relationship with NOAHH. Until 2013, including before Hurricane Katrina, St. Charles Avenue Baptist Church was where NOAHH’s offices were located. Reverend Elizabeth Lott said of the relationship, “We were grateful to house Habitat for many years and witness first-hand their impact on the city of New Orleans. How exciting to bring that history and heartbeat together through the great work of Habitat, and join together to invest in the life of the Pujol family and the neighborhood they will now call home.”

The Rev. Rob Courtney of St. Paul’s Episcopal Church and School said of the church’s motive to get involved, “As a congregation that experienced what it was like to be homeless for a time after Hurricane Katrina, we have felt a call to work with those who have been displaced. To help provide someone...”
MEASURED IN CITY BLOCKS: ORGILL GIVES BACK

Most ReStore donations are measured in relatively small increments—linear feet of lumber, pallets of tile, pounds of nails—but when independent hardware store supplier Orgill holds their trade show in New Orleans, their donations are measured in city blocks.

First in August 2015, on the tenth anniversary of Hurricane Katrina, and again this past February, shortly before Mardi Gras (and during the NBA All-Star Game, which was being played a few blocks away!), Orgill hosted their vendor show at the Ernest Morial Convention Center, using all ten halls, each one as long as a city block.

With everything from patio furniture and lawn equipment to brand new tools and furniture, the 2017 donation required 30 volunteers, partner families, AmeriCorps NCCCs, and NOAHH staff coordinating with staff from Orgill, the Convention Center, and the Morial Convention Center, using all ten halls, each one as long as a city block.

With everything from patio furniture and lawn equipment to brand new tools and furniture, the 2017 donation required 30 volunteers, partner families, AmeriCorps NCCCs, and NOAHH staff coordinating with staff from Orgill, the Convention Center, and the Convention Center, using all ten halls, each one as long as a city block.

Once the donations were delivered, the NOAHH ReStore staff and volunteers began processing, pricing, and placing them on the sales floor. With so much donated, it took an entire month to fully process. With just the first few truckloads delivered, the ReStore was bursting with amazing material—and between the two donations, enough was raised through sales to fund three homes. Through partnerships with companies like Orgill, the Convention Center, and GES, NOAHH is able to support our mission through home-building, as well as by providing affordable materials to local families and companies for repair projects and home maintenance.

Any gift to the ReStore has an impact that extends far beyond the transaction. NOAHH thanks everyone at Orgill, GES, and the Morial Convention Center for their support and continuing dedication to affordable housing in New Orleans!

If your organization has a donation for the ReStore, call Kieran at 504-609-3331 to schedule a free pickup!

UNITY BUILD PARTNERS
Household of Faith Family Worship Church
Trinity Episcopal Church
St. Charles Avenue Presbyterian Church
St. Charles Avenue Baptist Church
First Baptist New Orleans
Lakeview Presbyterian Church
John Calvin Presbyterian Church
Temple Sinai
St. Paul’s Episcopal Church
The Sixth Baptist Church
Rayne Memorial United Methodist Church
After almost 36 years of building, NOAHH has seen thousands of women build hundreds of homes. From our founding board members to our current homeowners, women have made up a majority of our supporters and partners. Yet in the midst of our first annual Women Build, there was no shortage of men who stopped to stare, and there were many women who left the build site with newfound confidence in their construction skills: “It was wonderful to get out and be able to provide a service that helps to better our community, and a family in need,” said Women Build volunteer Courtney Davis-Hebert. “Even though we operate daily in a male-dominated industry, it was fun to get our hands dirty and take on another role that is usually male-dominated.”

Over 300 women volunteered to fund and build a home for Monica Grandpre and her two children. In total, over 500 volunteers and supporters were involved in the event, from the donors to the partner families who joined us on site to the women on staff who led the build. In just 12 days, the women of New Orleans came together with Monica to build a home that will be a legacy for generations. Her kids have a great mom.”

Erica worked side-by-side with all of us. The day we put in the living room floor Monica wanted the best outcome—we chose pattern and boards together to her design eye. The pride and joy she was experiencing was something I will always cherish!”

- Monica Grandpre, Habitat Women Build Homeowner

“I don’t put anything past women. I feel like you can do anything anybody else can do.”

- Rebecca Maisel, Women Build Volunteer, the Brick Freedias

“Women build hundreds of homes. NOAHH has seen thousands of women build hundreds of homes. From our founding board members to our current homeowners, women have made up a majority of our supporters and partners. Yet in the midst of our first annual Women Build, there was no shortage of men who stopped to stare, and there were many women who left the build site with newfound confidence in their construction skills: “It was wonderful to get out and be able to provide a service that helps to better our community, and a family in need,” said Women Build volunteer Courtney Davis-Hebert. “Even though we operate daily in a male-dominated industry, it was fun to get our hands dirty and take on another role that is usually male-dominated.”

Over 300 women volunteered to fund and build a home for Monica Grandpre and her two children. In total, over 500 volunteers and supporters were involved in the event, from the donors to the partner families who joined us on site to the women on staff who led the build. In just 12 days, the women of New Orleans came together with Monica to build a home that will be a legacy that will endure for generations. Having children of her own is what drove Monica to pursue her long-cherished dream of homeownership. She began looking many years ago, but she hesitated to apply to Habitat’s program until the situation in her neighborhood became too dangerous for her to remain there with her children. In the summer of 2016, she made a call that would change her life. Not long after applying, she was accepted into the First Time Homebuyer’s Program, and a few months later, her home was selected for NOAHH’s first annual Women Build.

Working nights at Royal House, she was able to devote her days to working her sweat equity. Monica worked diligently, completing almost all of her hours before the build. She made time to meet with as many volunteers as she could, not just to thank them, but because she understood—as someone who had helped build other people’s homes—how much a difference it made to meet the future homeowner.

Monica did not miss a day of the build, and her presence always brought renewed excitement from the volunteers. Her commitment also shone through in her work; she would see every task she undertook to the finish. No matter what she was doing—installing spindles on her porch or blowing in insulation—she kept working until the task was done.

“It was awesome meeting Monica,” said Kelly Theard, Women Build team leader. “I was so impressed with her eagerness to get down and do the work, and her excitement was infectious. It was amazing that she spent most of the day with us working on her home, and then went to work her shift that night. I am so excited for her and her family. Her kids have a great mom.”

“I was out there every day because it was my house,” Monica said. “I felt like this project was a big, big deal, and I wanted to be there. This was women who were coming out each day to help, I wanted to know them and to thank them. It was inspiring to see women leading and doing all of the work.”

While women did all of the construction, some supplies were delivered to the site by men. One such supplier hesitated when he saw an entire site full of women there to take his delivery: “He is a very sweet man, but he doesn’t like a woman to have to carry heavy materials,” said Colleen Gately, NOAHH AmeriCorps. “He always yells out to a man on site to come carry the load. Countless times he has told me not to carry a box because ‘it’s too heavy for you,’ and every time I’ve jokingly responded and shown him otherwise. On this day we had 20 women lined up to move his delivery, and he was very hesitant. He could not find a single man to call out to to help us. Of course, we got it done. This moment made me truly aware of how important this Women Build was for all of us. I realized it was not only to empower women to believe they can do anything, but also to empower men to believe it, too.”

Many of NOAHH’s longtime partners joined us on site for the build, including Women Build presenting sponsor GE Digital Women’s Network. Other partners, including Marriott International and Fidelity Bank and newer partners from Woodward Design+Build, brought teams to site and brought men from their offices to serve lunch to the volunteers.

“There was the feeling that each of us experienced, when we realized that we were a part of something bigger. We realized we were not just hammering the weatherboards of a house, but building a home for a family.”

- Judy Perry Martinez, Women Build Team Leader, Hammer on Krewe

“I felt inspired and empowered every day that I arrived to the Women Build site. Each person that was involved in the experience put all of her heart into the project, which resulted in an extremely successful blitz build. By working as a cohesive team, the women of Women Build blew my expectations out of the water.”

- Amanda Smith, Women Build House Leader

“My favorite moment from the Women Build was being able to work on the porch railing with Monica. I love that we were a team of strong, wonderful women working on a house for an inspiring, hardworking mother, who was there working right alongside us.”

- Jane Scott Hodges, Women Build, Team Leader, Designing Women

“Hammer on Krewe is a very sweet man, but he doesn’t like a woman to have to carry heavy materials,” said Colleen Gately, NOAHH AmeriCorps. “He always yells out to a man on site to come carry the load. Countless times he has told me not to carry a box because ‘it’s too heavy for you,’ and every time I’ve jokingly responded and shown him otherwise. On this day we had 20 women lined up to move his delivery, and he was very hesitant. He could not find a single man to call out to to help us. Of course, we got it done. This moment made me truly aware of how important this Women Build was for all of us. I realized it was not only to empower women to believe they can do anything, but also to empower men to believe it, too.”

Many of NOAHH’s longtime partners joined us on site for the build, including Women Build presenting sponsor GE Digital Women’s Network. Other partners, including Marriott International and Fidelity Bank and newer partners from Woodward Design+Build, brought teams to site and brought men from their offices to serve lunch to the volunteers.

“There was the feeling that each of us experienced, when we realized that we were a part of something bigger. We realized we were not just hammering the weatherboards of a house, but building a home for a family.”

- Judy Perry Martinez, Women Build Team Leader, Hammer on Krewe

“I felt inspired and empowered every day that I arrived to the Women Build site. Each person that was involved in the experience put all of her heart into the project, which resulted in an extremely successful blitz build. By working as a cohesive team, the women of Women Build blew my expectations out of the water.”

- Amanda Smith, Women Build House Leader

“My favorite moment from the Women Build was being able to work on the porch railing with Monica. I love that we were a team of strong, wonderful women working on a house for an inspiring, hardworking single mother, who was there working right alongside us.”

- Jane Scott Hodges, Women Build, Team Leader, Designing Women
LEARNING ON SITE: PARTNERING WITH JOB CORPS

A Habitat build site is an excellent place to learn. Through NOAHH’s partnership with Job Corps of New Orleans, the affiliate provides training opportunities to local students. Job Corps of New Orleans empowers eligible young adults by teaching them job skills and independence, placing them in meaningful employment or further education, including apprenticeships and advanced training programs. Many of their carpentry students train on Habitat sites.

The partnership began in 2006 and has continued to grow since. NOAHH’s volunteer experience allows Job Corps carpentry students to gain valuable work experience and allows them to apply the skills they learned in the classroom. Habitat staff are there to guide and assist them on site, providing the students with professional training.

In fall 2016, this local partnership emphasized how one person’s work could impact their own community. Job Corps students had the opportunity to help NOAHH in our flood relief efforts as well as with our home-building work. To Job Corps, this made the partnership unique.

“New Orleans Job Corps students are always reinvigorated following a day working with New Orleans Habitat for Humanity,” said Randy Savoe, the Business and Community Liaison at New Orleans Job Corps Center. “They speak of the confidence gained by the practical application of skills learned in the classroom, new skills learned from Habitat mentors, and of the sense of gratification derived from helping improve neighborhoods where they themselves reside.”

Working with volunteers on site allows students to learn more than construction skills. Working together with others outside of their classes helps them learn teamwork and how to adapt in a new environment.

“It gives us the sense that our students have come to appreciate the value of teamwork and deadline and have had the opportunity to learn about other cultures while working with Habitat volunteers from across the country,” said Randy.

We will be building two homes for Women Build 2018. Contact Avery at 504-609-3339 to get involved.
For Michael, owning his own home means stability. He won’t ever have to worry about rent increases or not having his lease renewed. Michael feels a new level of security in knowing that his home is equipped to meet his physical needs as they change over time. Most importantly, this home gives Michael peace of mind in knowing that he has a solid asset to leave behind for his children. When asked what he would do the day he was handed the key to his home, this is what Michael had to say: “I think the first thing I’m going to do is stand in the living room and jump for joy. I think after that I’m going to be somewhere nice and quiet, and pray. Thank God for that blessing.”

Michael knows he has a new level of security, as he has a solid asset to leave behind for his children. This home gives him peace of mind in knowing that he has a solid asset to leave behind for his children. When asked what he would do the day he was handed the key to his home, this is what Michael had to say: “I think the first thing I’m going to do is stand in the living room and jump for joy. I think after that I’m going to be somewhere nice and quiet, and pray. Thank God for that blessing.”

Walter Welford, President of New Orleans Area Habitat for Humanity, says, “Michael’s gift is a testament to the power of donors who stepped up to cover these expenses. For Michael, owning his own home means stability. He won’t ever have to worry about rent increases or not having his lease renewed. Michael feels a new level of security in knowing that his home is equipped to meet his physical needs as they change over time. Most importantly, this home gives Michael peace of mind in knowing that he has a solid asset to leave behind for his children. When asked what he would do the day he was handed the key to his home, this is what Michael had to say: “I think the first thing I’m going to do is stand in the living room and jump for joy. I think after that I’m going to be somewhere nice and quiet, and pray. Thank God for that blessing.”

Walter Welford, President of New Orleans Area Habitat for Humanity, says, “Michael’s gift is a testament to the power of donors who stepped up to cover these expenses. For Michael, owning his own home means stability. He won’t ever have to worry about rent increases or not having his lease renewed. Michael feels a new level of security in knowing that his home is equipped to meet his physical needs as they change over time. Most importantly, this home gives Michael peace of mind in knowing that he has a solid asset to leave behind for his children. When asked what he would do the day he was handed the key to his home, this is what Michael had to say: “I think the first thing I’m going to do is stand in the living room and jump for joy. I think after that I’m going to be somewhere nice and quiet, and pray. Thank God for that blessing.”

Walter Welford, President of New Orleans Area Habitat for Humanity, says, “Michael’s gift is a testament to the power of donors who stepped up to cover these expenses. For Michael, owning his own home means stability. He won’t ever have to worry about rent increases or not having his lease renewed. Michael feels a new level of security in knowing that his home is equipped to meet his physical needs as they change over time. Most importantly, this home gives Michael peace of mind in knowing that he has a solid asset to leave behind for his children. When asked what he would do the day he was handed the key to his home, this is what Michael had to say: “I think the first thing I’m going to do is stand in the living room and jump for joy. I think after that I’m going to be somewhere nice and quiet, and pray. Thank God for that blessing.”
One of the most remarkable aspects of NOAHH’s partnerships with our homeowners is that they often continue long after a partner family closes on their home. Though they have contributed to our mission through sweat equity, many continue giving back through volunteering, outreach, or raising awareness.

Melvin Thompson never stopped volunteering. Unable to volunteer on the build site, he worked all of his sweat equity in the ReStore. He formed such a strong bond with the staff that when his hours were over, he chose to remain as a core volunteer, coming almost every day to help in the store.

“At first when I came in, [the staff] used to help me do things like move things around,” said Melvin. “Now I help people bring things to their truck, and I help unload the truck and put it on the carts. I like to come around and help.”

The ReStore staff now considers Melvin part of their family. He works with them every week, assisting customers and moving donations to the sales floor, but what brings him back is the chance to spend time with those he befriended during his partnership.

The most effective testimonials for Habitat’s homeownership program come from our partner families. They can speak personal experience about the need for housing. For educator Scott Mersen, it’s a chance to teach his students about their city and the impact they can have, taking what he learned in the program and passing it on to a new generation. After moving into his new home, he brought out a group of students to help build homes for others.

For Andrea Meier, knowing what others face trying to find a home is what has motivated her to keep giving back: “I became aware of how hard it was to find housing once I had children,” she said. “When you’re a single person, you can get away with different kinds of living arrangements. When you have kids, you realize you’re going to need more bedrooms, and the rent is only getting higher. Then you start to look around, and you see that everyone is struggling. Before Habitat, the house I lived in was a one-bedroom shotgun that was getting sold for short-term rentals. Because of that, I became very passionate about affordable housing, not just for my family, but for everyone.”

A year after settling into her own Habitat home, Andrea joined NOAHH on site for Women Build. There she met Shawna Beasley, a future homeowner volunteering her first day on the build site. Since then, she began working with Shawna on her sweat equity hours.

“I enjoy working outside and learning new skills,” Andrea said. “It sets a good example for my kids, to go out and make an effort doing something you don’t have to do. It’s good to be involved in something that you believe in. Not only the actual work I do is helping, but getting the word out is helping.”

Habitat for Humanity has always said, ‘there’s another pretty house going up,’” Izara said. “It’s eye-catching. We had all rundown houses, and now there’s all these bright-colored houses. It’s brightening up the neighborhood.”

Hurricane Katrina left their home almost unlivable and forced them to move into a single room. The Andrews love their quiet neighborhood and were determined to fix up their home. “We are so used to this street,” she said. “We would be lost in another area.”

For some of the projects, they needed a little help. One day, as James was walking down his street, he passed a Habitat build site. He met one of NOAHH’s staff who told him about the A Brush With Kindness home repair program: “They were down the street building a house,” Izara said. “A lady there talked to him. She told us to give Habitat a call, and we did.”

The Andrews were accepted into NOAHH’s home repair program. A Brush With Kindness helps homeowners whose homes are in need of work with projects ranging from painting or fencing to roof and cabinet repairs. NOAHH fixed their driveway and floors and painted the exterior of their home. Volunteers from Leidos, a long-time partner of the affiliate, joined NOAHH at their home, meeting with the Andrews: “I took my grandson for basketball practice,” she said. “When I came back, there were 12 people there. They all shook our hands. They told us they were proud to do the work.”

In less than a month, the floors were restored, the driveway was fixed, and the home was painted, helping their family remain in the community they love.

One of the most remarkable aspects of NOAHH’s partnerships with our homeowners is that they often continue long after a partner family closes on their home. Though they have contributed to our mission through sweat equity, many continue giving back through volunteering, outreach, or raising awareness.

Melvin Thompson never stopped volunteering. Unable to volunteer on the build site, he worked all of his sweat equity in the ReStore. He formed such a strong bond with the staff that when his hours were over, he chose to remain as a core volunteer, coming almost every day to help in the store.

“At first when I came in, [the staff] used to help me do things like move things around,” said Melvin. “Now I help people bring things to their truck, and I help unload the truck and put it on the carts. I like to come around and help.”

The ReStore staff now considers Melvin part of their family. He works with them every week, assisting customers and moving donations to the sales floor, but what brings him back is the chance to spend time with those he befriended during his partnership.

The most effective testimonials for Habitat’s homeownership program come from our partner families. They can speak personal experience about the need for housing. For educator Scott Mersen, it’s a chance to teach his students about their city and the impact they can have, taking what he learned in the program and passing it on to a new generation. After moving into his new home, he brought out a group of students to help build homes for others.

For Andrea Meier, knowing what others face trying to find a home is what has motivated her to keep giving back: “I became aware of how hard it was to find housing once I had children,” she said. “When you’re a single person, you can get away with different kinds of living arrangements. When you have kids, you realize you’re going to need more bedrooms, and the rent is only getting higher. Then you start to look around, and you see that everyone is struggling. Before Habitat, the house I lived in was a one-bedroom shotgun that was getting sold for short-term rentals. Because of that, I became very passionate about affordable housing, not just for my family, but for everyone.”

A year after settling into her own Habitat home, Andrea joined NOAHH on site for Women Build. There she met Shawna Beasley, a future homeowner volunteering her first day on the build site. Since then, she began working with Shawna on her sweat equity hours.

“I enjoy working outside and learning new skills,” Andrea said. “It sets a good example for my kids, to go out and make an effort doing something you don’t have to do. It’s good to be involved in something that you believe in. Not only the actual work I do is helping, but getting the word out is helping.”

Habitat for Humanity has always said, ‘there’s another pretty house going up,’” Izara said. “It’s eye-catching. We had all rundown houses, and now there’s all these bright-colored houses. It’s brightening up the neighborhood.”

Hurricane Katrina left their home almost unlivable and forced them to move into a single room. The Andrews love their quiet neighborhood and were determined to fix up their home. “We are so used to this street,” she said. “We would be lost in another area.”

For some of the projects, they needed a little help. One day, as James was walking down his street, he passed a Habitat build site. He met one of NOAHH’s staff who told him about the A Brush With Kindness home repair program: “They were down the street building a house,” Izara said. “A lady there talked to him. She told us to give Habitat a call, and we did.”

The Andrews were accepted into NOAHH’s home repair program. A Brush With Kindness helps homeowners whose homes are in need of work with projects ranging from painting or fencing to roof and cabinet repairs. NOAHH fixed their driveway and floors and painted the exterior of their home. Volunteers from Leidos, a long-time partner of the affiliate, joined NOAHH at their home, meeting with the Andrews: “I took my grandson for basketball practice,” she said. “When I came back, there were 12 people there. They all shook our hands. They told us they were proud to do the work.”

In less than a month, the floors were restored, the driveway was fixed, and the home was painted, helping their family remain in the community they love.

One of the most remarkable aspects of NOAHH’s partnerships with our homeowners is that they often continue long after a partner family closes on their home. Though they have contributed to our mission through sweat equity, many continue giving back through volunteering, outreach, or raising awareness.

Melvin Thompson never stopped volunteering. Unable to volunteer on the build site, he worked all of his sweat equity in the ReStore. He formed such a strong bond with the staff that when his hours were over, he chose to remain as a core volunteer, coming almost every day to help in the store.

“At first when I came in, [the staff] used to help me do things like move things around,” said Melvin. “Now I help people bring things to their truck, and I help unload the truck and put it on the carts. I like to come around and help.”

The ReStore staff now considers Melvin part of their family. He works with them every week, assisting customers and moving donations to the sales floor, but what brings him back is the chance to spend time with those he befriended during his partnership.

The most effective testimonials for Habitat’s homeownership program come from our partner families. They can speak personal experience about the need for housing. For educator Scott Mersen, it’s a chance to teach his students about their city and the impact they can have, taking what he learned in the program and passing it on to a new generation. After moving into his new home, he brought out a group of students to help build homes for others.

For Andrea Meier, knowing what others face trying to find a home is what has motivated her to keep giving back: “I became aware of how hard it was to find housing once I had children,” she said. “When you’re a single person, you can get away with different kinds of living arrangements. When you have kids, you realize you’re going to need more bedrooms, and the rent is only getting higher. Then you start to look around, and you see that everyone is struggling. Before Habitat, the house I lived in was a one-bedroom shotgun that was getting sold for short-term rentals. Because of that, I became very passionate about affordable housing, not just for my family, but for everyone.”

A year after settling into her own Habitat home, Andrea joined NOAHH on site for Women Build. There she met Shawna Beasley, a future homeowner volunteering her first day on the build site. Since then, she began working with Shawna on her sweat equity hours.

“I enjoy working outside and learning new skills,” Andrea said. “It sets a good example for my kids, to go out and make an effort doing something you don’t have to do. It’s good to be involved in something that you believe in. Not only the actual work I do is helping, but getting the word out is helping.”

Habitat for Humanity has always said, ‘there’s another pretty house going up,’” Izara said. “It’s eye-catching. We had all rundown houses, and now there’s all these bright-colored houses. It’s brightening up the neighborhood.”

Hurricane Katrina left their home almost unlivable and forced them to move into a single room. The Andrews love their quiet neighborhood and were determined to fix up their home. “We are so used to this street,” she said. “We would be lost in another area.”

For some of the projects, they needed a little help. One day, as James was walking down his street, he passed a Habitat build site. He met one of NOAHH’s staff who told him about the A Brush With Kindness home repair program: “They were down the street building a house,” Izara said. “A lady there talked to him. She told us to give Habitat a call, and we did.”

The Andrews were accepted into NOAHH’s home repair program. A Brush With Kindness helps homeowners whose homes are in need of work with projects ranging from painting or fencing to roof and cabinet repairs. NOAHH fixed their driveway and floors and painted the exterior of their home. Volunteers from Leidos, a long-time partner of the affiliate, joined NOAHH at their home, meeting with the Andrews: “I took my grandson for basketball practice,” she said. “When I came back, there were 12 people there. They all shook our hands. They told us they were proud to do the work.”

In less than a month, the floors were restored, the driveway was fixed, and the home was painted, helping their family remain in the community they love.
A REUNION OF FRIENDS

Camaraderie is common on the build site. Working with someone, whether lifting trusses or painting walls, brings people closer together. For old friends who volunteer together, it’s a chance to renew bonds and enjoy each other’s company once again. Some groups, like the Aloha Spa Boys, have made reuniting on a Habitat site an annual tradition. They have come to New Orleans Habitat for ten years now.

For the Spa Boys, their reunion is about reconnecting with each other and with those they helped before. On their visit in September 2017, they stopped in with two of the homeowners whose homes they worked on in previous years.

“We had a great week,” said Brian Greenbaum of the Spa Boys. “It was amazing and so rewarding having the ability to get a first-hand look at the work we have done over the last ten years. It was especially great to meet Lakisha and Andrea and see how they have made the house we built their actual homes!”

To schedule your group or reunion activity, please contact Michelle at 504-609-3349.

RESTORE CONSTRUCTION UNDER WAY!

We’re thrilled to announce that we have begun construction on our second ReStore! With your support, NOAHH has seen years of preparation turn into a source for future sustainability. We will be posting updates on our website, so check back often for news of our progress. With this new location in Kenner, NOAHH will be building new partnerships in a new community, broadening our donor base and clientele. The funds generated by this new store will directly support our programs and operations, allowing the affiliate to plan for the future with confidence. Visit us at www.nola-restore.org to learn more.